

Citizens Redistricting Commission
University of California, Los Angeles Voting Rights Project
Statement of Qualifications

January 29, 2021

Dear Commissioners:

The University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA) Voting Rights Project (VRP) is honored to present its qualifications to the California Citizens Redistricting Commission.

The UCLA Voting Rights Project is a flagship project at UCLA and is in partnership with the Luskin School of Public Affairs and its Latino Policy and Politics Initiative, the UCLA School of Social Sciences, and the UCLA School of Law. The UCLA VRP was founded in August 2018 by Dr. Matt Barreto, PhD. and Mr. Chad Dunn, J.D., both experts in their fields. Dr. Barreto is a respected voting rights expert witness, best known for his work researching voter behavior and other redistricting issues. Mr. Dunn is an accomplished voting rights attorney with 18 years of trial and appellate experience in a variety of matters, including voting rights work in multiple states. Mr. Dunn has served and continues to serve as counsel of record before the United States Supreme Court on several voting rights cases. He has argued before federal courts of appeals on more than two dozen occasions, many of which focused on voting and civil rights. He has tried many more voting rights and election cases before trial courts around the country. The UCLA Voting Rights Project is a leading voting rights organization that combines a world-class academic voting rights research center, litigation experience in California and nationally, and clinical teaching. As the attached materials will demonstrate, the combined experience of Dr. Barreto and Mr. Dunn, coupled with the UCLA VRP staff, is unparalleled.

Scope of Work

The UCLA Voting Rights Project understands the mission and legal requirements that the California Citizens Redistricting Commission is responsible for drawing the districts for the possible 52 U.S. Congressional Districts, 40 California Senate Districts, 80 California Assembly Districts, and 4 Board of Equalization Districts.

In order to accomplish this task, we that the scope of work encompasses, but is not limited to:

- Reviewing all legal documents pertaining to districting, apportionment, and voting rights;
- Considering legal issues pertaining to inaccurate census count of the California population;
- Evaluating and providing legal analysis for proposed maps;
- Working collaboratively with other experts and advisors employed by the Commission;

- Developing and analyzing Racially Polarized Voting data to advise the Commission for all proposed maps;
- Preparing legal memoranda related to applicable legal issues;
- Consulting on legal issues that may arise due to changes in federal law or legal precedent during the redistricting cycle;
- Developing and implementing a redistricting process that is fair, legal, and should withstand a challenge in court;
- Providing legal advice to the Commission and Commission staff;
- Hiring data experts; and
- Putting forth legal considerations to the Commission prior to proposed map drawing.

The UCLA Voting Rights Project envisions that our experts will be present at Commission meetings, public hearings prior to map drawing, and public hearings to consider and adopt proposed maps.

We believe that due to the concerns over the 2020 decennial census, including the possible loss of Congressional seats in the California delegation and the possible undercounting of immigrant and non-immigrant populations in California, the Commission will need to balance many moving parts. The Commission will likely need to consider how to fairly redraw districting boundaries in areas in which Congressional seats may be lost and how to determine a method of drawing districts in areas of the State where racial minorities live in large numbers. The Commission's task will require the services of voting rights experts who have been involved in multiple aspects of the redistricting process, including the representation of both voters and government actors. The UCLA Voting Rights Project currently excels at combining data science with legal knowledge to provide expert advice to jurisdictions that may be in violation of the Federal Voting Rights Act. The UCLA Voting Rights Project has the necessary experience to guide and serve the Commission as it requires.

The Project understands the scope of work needed and is happy to be of service to the Commission in whatever capacity will best serve the State of California and Californians. We know that the work that the California Redistricting Commission engages in is in-depth and comprehensive and may require the work of multiple voting rights experts. We are accustomed to working with outside organizations and added team members who provide additional expertise. In this particular case, providing redistricting assistance to the largest, most diverse State in the country may involve multiple teams depending on what the California Redistricting Commission concludes is necessary to accomplish the scope of work. We are open to this possibility.

1. Personnel

The UCLA VRP team will be led by Chad W. Dunn and supported by Sonni Waknin, Sonja Diaz, Alana Friedman, as well as the other attorneys and fellows employed by the Project. Additionally, as appropriate, we may rely on our affiliated faculty and experts for social science analyses.

Chad Dunn—Project Lead

Chad Dunn is a national figure in voting rights litigation and has received national attention for his trial and appellate work on voting rights and redistricting. Dunn has represented government units, legislators and executive officers in every step of the redistricting process, litigation and appeals. He was one of the trial attorneys in the three-judge federal court cases in Washington D.C. and San Antonio concerning Texas’s 2011 State House, Senate, and Congressional redistricting plans. He was a lead trial lawyer in the three-judge federal case in Washington D.C. concerning Texas’s voter photo identification law, in which the court enjoined Texas from implementing the law under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act. Dunn was later a lead trial lawyer in case against that same voter I.D. law under Section 2 of the VRA; he argued the case three times at the circuit court level, including one en banc argument, and was counsel of record in the three Supreme Court appeals. Dunn has also litigated multiple Section 2 Voting Rights Act cases on behalf of racial minority plaintiffs and defending governmental units. He leads the UCLA School of Law Voting Rights Policy and Practice legal clinic, which teaches students the law behind voting rights cases, as well as the necessary litigation methods and practices.

Dunn is the Legal Director for the UCLA VRP and will be responsible for directing the work related to the Citizens Redistricting Commission, managing the Project’s lawyers, and will be responsible for all legal research, analyses, and opinions coming from the Voting Rights Project. The anticipated percentage of time that Dunn will be spending on Commission work is 25 percent.

Dunn is admitted to the bars of the U.S. Supreme Court and the United States Courts of Appeals for Fifth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh and D.C. circuits. He is licensed in multiple states.

Sonja Diaz

Sonja Diaz is the Founding Executive Director of the Latino Policy and Politics Initiative and counsel with the UCLA Voting Rights Project. Diaz served as policy counsel to U.S. Sen. Kamala D. Harris during her first and second terms as California’s Attorney General, managing legal and policy issues of statewide and national importance, including civil rights, consumer protection, criminal justice, immigration, and privacy and technology policy. During her tenure, Diaz was lead counsel on a voting rights investigative package and directed all aspects of the Attorney General’s 21st Century Policing, Immigrant Rights, and Cyber Exploitation working groups.

In 2016, Diaz directed a robust voter protection program to support Democratic candidates in Virginia as part of the Clinton-Kaine presidential campaign's battleground state apparatus, including a commonwealth-wide election monitoring program for language minorities. The anticipated percentage of time Diaz will spend on Commission work is 10 percent.

Diaz is licensed to practice law in the State of California.

Sonni Waknin

Sonni Waknin is the UCLA Managing Attorney and Voting Rights Counsel. In her position, she is responsible for project managing all litigation and research projects within the Voting Rights Project. Waknin has experience working on voting rights litigation on the State court and Federal level, including Section 2 Voting Rights Act cases.

Waknin will be responsible for managing projects related to the Citizens Redistricting Commission and will be responsible for assigning Commission work to UCLA VRP staff and research fellows. The anticipated percentage of time Waknin will spend on Commission work is 25 percent.

Waknin is licensed to practice law in the State of California.

Alana Friedman

Alana Friedman is the UCLA Voting Rights Project's Voting Rights Counsel. Friedman assists with legal research and legal work conducted by the Project. She has experience with civil rights litigation and civil rights policy. Friedman will be responsible for conducting legal research and drafting memos pertaining to the Citizens Redistricting Commission. The anticipated percentage of time Friedman will spend on Commission work is 25 percent.

Friedman is licensed to practice law in the State of California.

Additional Personnel

The project may hire or contract with additional counsel, fellows and/or subject matter experts as necessary to complete this important work.

2. General Organization Description

The UCLA Voting Rights Project is a flagship project at UCLA and represents a partnership between the Luskin School of Public Affairs and its Latino Policy and Politics Initiative, the UCLA School of Social Sciences, and the UCLA School of Law. The VRP is unique in its position as an academic and clinical operation, not a for-profit law firm, that operates out of UCLA to provide voting rights legal research and counsel to clients, as appropriate, alongside offering clinical education to the University's law students, graduate students, and select group of undergraduates.

The UCLA Voting Rights was founded in August 2018 by Dr. Matt Barreto, PhD. and Chad Dunn, J.D., both experts in their fields. The Project was founded to address the monumental and overlooked gaps in the field: training of new lawyers, expert witnesses and voting behavior researchers; supporting the development of new legal and social science theories for voting rights cases; and advancing policy development and analysis for government actors. The central focus of the UCLA VRP is to ensure that there is a new generation of well-trained leaders who effectively pursue efforts to guarantee all citizens have equal and fair access to the Right to Vote.

As a research center, clinical program, and legal services provider, the UCLA VRP not just has practical experience in the field of work the Commission engages in, but it also is well-versed in teaching legal practice as well as research, writing, and social science. This broad skill set enables the VRP to advise the Commission, Commission staff, and consultants regarding the legal requirements and procedures, policy concerns, and the legal and policy implications concerning all redistricting activities.

The Project's approach to districting, redistricting, and voting rights issues under the Federal Voting Rights Act is multi-pronged. With respect to drawing new districts after the issuance of a new decennial census, the VRP generally proceeds as follows:

1. Analyze the benchmark map, process, and propose a procedure for the adoption of a benchmark map, litigation history, and relevant court decisions concerning the benchmark map.
2. Analyze the election history of the benchmark map and categorize districts drawn to protect minority voting rights. Whether or not they are drawn to protect minority voting rights, we categorize districts as performing minority rights districts and coalition districts versus districts drawn to protect minority voting rights that are not performing.
3. Review the released census data and, working with appropriate social science experts, develop a descriptive analysis of the data by looking at relevant population changes.
4. Consider appropriate agency advocacy and/or litigation to address any observed deficiencies in the census data. Assist with identifying areas where a racially polarized voting analysis would be helpful.
5. Compile expert analysis into reports that weigh evidence and other factors a court would consider if a challenge were brought against the new maps under Federal voting rights laws.
6. Review community input and commission debates, including in legal analysis as relevant.
7. Review proposed and adopted maps for compliance with Federal and State voting rights laws.
8. Provide legal research and analysis as requested.

9. Prepare the entire redistricting process to position the Commission's work to have the best chance of surviving court scrutiny in the event the Commission's work is challenged.

3. Experience

Our team has the experience, training, and education to advise the Commission on the procedures, policy concerns, and legal implications surrounding the upcoming redistricting process.

Chad Dunn's experience in voting rights litigation and expertise regarding the Federal Voting Rights Act and California Voting Rights Act. The following are some examples:

- Harding v. County of Dallas, 948 F.3d 302, 309 (5th Cir. 2020)
 - Dunn represented Dallas County, Texas, in a challenge by Anglo voters under Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act, alleging that Dallas County's redistricting plan discriminated against Anglo voters for providing one Anglo-majority district. Dunn successfully defended Dallas County; the Fifth Circuit found that there was no Section 2 violation and that the plaintiffs failed to satisfy the Gingles factors.
- Higginson v. Poway, 948 Fed. Appx. 705 (9th Cir. 2019)
 - Dunn and the UCLA VRP filed an important amicus brief in opposition to a case arguing that the California Voting Rights Act violates the Federal Constitution. The brief Dunn filed was heavily discussed by the Ninth Circuit Court at oral argument.
- Veasey v. Abbott, 830 F. 3d 216 (5th Cir. 2016)
 - Dunn represented the lead name plaintiff, Congressman Marc Veasey, in a challenge to Texas's voter identification law under Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act and the Fourteenth, Fifteenth, and Twenty-Fourth Amendments to the United States Constitution. Dunn argued before both the district court and Fifth Circuit, showing that the voter identification law had a disparate impact and discriminatory effect on Black and Latino voters in Texas. The district court ruled in favor of Dunn and the plaintiffs. On appeal, the Fifth Circuit en banc ruled in favor of Dunn and the plaintiffs, finding that Texas's voter identification law violated Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act through its discriminatory effects. Dunn served as one of the lead trial counsel, argued the case three times before the Fifth Circuit, and served as Counsel of Record in the multiple U.S. Supreme Court appeals.
- Texas v. United States, 887 F. Supp. 2d 133 (D.D.C. 2012)
 - Dunn served as counsel for intervenor-defendants before a three-judge panel in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. Dunn represented challengers to Texas's U.S. Congressional and State House districting plans under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act. The court ruled in favor of Dunn and intervenor-defendants, finding that Texas did not meet its burden to show that the maps in question would not have a retrogressive effect and were not enacted with a discriminatory purpose.

- Gonzalez v. Harris County, 601 Fed. Appx 255 (5th Cir. 2015)
 - Dunn served as the lead plaintiff trial counsel and appeal counsel, representing Latino citizens in a suit alleging a Section 2 Voting Rights Act violation against Harris County.
- Perry v. Perez, 565 U.S. 388 (2012)
 - Dunn served as trial counsel and counsel of record in multiple appeals to the United States Supreme Court. During the lower court trial, Perez v. Perry, 2014 WL 3359324 (W.D.T.X. 2014), the court determined that Texas's statewide redistricting plans violated the U.S. Constitution and the Voting Rights Act.
- Cisneros v. Pasadena Independent School District, 2014 WL 1668500 (S.D.T.X. 2014)
 - Dunn served as lead plaintiff's counsel in a challenge to single member districts of the public school district board under Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act.
- In addition to the cases above, Dunn has also been counsel in Davis v. Perry, challenging the Texas state senate district maps, Pettaway v. Henry, representing voters bringing a Section 5 Voting Rights Act case against Galveston County's redistricting plan, and Rodriguez v. Harris County, Texas.

In addition to Dunn's work on redistricting, Dunn has a plethora of experience in voting rights litigation and the teaching of voting rights jurisprudence:

- During 2020, Dunn served as the lead attorney representing LULAC as intervenors in RNC v. Newsom, to protect the expansion of mail voting during the COVID-19 pandemic, which was dismissed by the federal judge.
- In 2019, Dunn represented LULAC and minority voters in a challenge to Texas's plan to purge immigrant naturalized citizens from the voter roll. The district court enjoined the plan, and Texas was forced to abandon the effort.
- Dunn is also the lead attorney in Garcia v. Abbott, in which he represents Texas voters challenging the Texas mail voting laws that permit no-excuse mail voting for those over the age of 65 but require an excuse for those under the age of 65. Dunn won a preliminary injunction at the district court level, but the injunction was stayed by the Fifth Circuit. The case is currently pending before the U.S. Supreme Court.
- Dunn represented the Raysor Plaintiffs, former convicted felons, who sought restoration of their voting rights by Proposition 4 in Florida in Gruver v. Barton (consolidated with Jones v. DeSantis). In Gruver, the plaintiffs won a preliminary injunction at the district court level, which was affirmed by the Eleventh Circuit. The en banc Eleventh Circuit issued an order reversing and vacating the district court's ruling. The case is pending on a petition for writ of certiorari at the U.S. Supreme Court.
- Through Dunn's experience as counsel in voting rights cases on behalf of voters and political subdivisions, Dunn has performed all customary duties required of districting counsel including advising line drawers to the procedures, legality of documents, policy concerns, and legal implications of redistricting activities. Dunn has worked closely with leading voting rights expert witnesses in California and nationally, and has immense experience analyzing racially polarized voting, districting maps, historical evidence and statistical voting patterns of minority communities.

- Dunn also has tremendous litigation and trial experience in jurisdictions around the country, including California. Dunn has tried as lead counsel, approximately two dozen disputed cases to juries and more than twice that many to judges. Dunn’s appearances include numerous trials before special three-judge federal courts, which are typical in cases challenging statewide apportionment and redistricting plans.
- As a lecturer of Voting Rights Law and Policy at the Luskin School of Public Affairs and the UCLA School of Law, Dunn has extensive experience in teaching Federal and State Voting Rights law, how to conduct preliminary racially polarized voting analysis, and trial and practice skills.
- Dunn is frequently invited to speak to lawyers, elected officials, and the public on the topic of voting rights. Organizations that have asked Dunn to speak include the American Bar Association, American Constitutional Society, and the Politics of Race, Immigration, and Ethnicity Consortium (PRIEC).
- Dunn has co-authored legal scholarship on voting rights, including: Ensuring Equal Access to the Mail-In Ballot Box, UCLA L. REV. DISCOURSE, (August 31, 2020); Legal Theories to Compel Vote-by-mail in Federal Court, CAL. L. REV. CIRCUIT, (May 13, 2020); and Vote-by-Mail Can Save Our Democracy, but Reforms are Needed, NW. UNIV. L. REV. OF NOTE, (March 23, 2020). Dunn, along with Dr. Barreto and others, has submitted for publication a law review article describing recently developed methods of observing racially polarized voting and consideration of the effect of this new method on voting rights legal issues.

Dunn will be leading a team featuring Sonja Diaz, Sonni Waknin, Alana Friedman, and additional added counsel if necessary.

Sonja Diaz’s experience is wide ranging. Diaz has the following voting rights experience:

- During her time as a Special Deputy Attorney General, Diaz was the lead counsel on voting rights legal investigative package and was responsible for Federal Voting Rights Act and California Voting Rights Act briefings to then-Attorney General Kamala D. Harris.
- As a Law Clerk for the U.S. Department of Justice, Civil Rights Division, Voting Section, Diaz produced essential legal research and case briefs for pre-litigation Section 2 Voting Rights Act vote dilution claims, ongoing Section 5 pre-clearance issues, and trial preparation for South Carolina v. U.S. voter identification trial.
- Diaz served as the Regional Director of Voter Protection in Virginia for the 2016 Clinton Presidential Campaign.
 - As Regional Director, Diaz provided legal guidance with respect to the Federal Voting Rights Act, the First Amendment, and both Federal and State-level election law to senior campaign staff. Diaz also designed a language minority voter protection program throughout the Commonwealth.
- Diaz has experience with the requirements of California state law and redistricting statistical methods. As Associate of the California Voting Rights Act Roundtable, Diaz performed complex legal research for voting rights docket. She supported senior partners in negotiations in Moreno v. Anaheim and provided research, writing, and strategy for the appeals team in Jaregui v. Palmdale, both involving the California Voting Rights Act. In that role, she synthesized demographic and electoral data for over 1,000 at-large election districts in California.

Additionally, Diaz is currently the Executive Director and Co-Founder of the UCLA Latino Policy and Politics Initiative. As Executive Director, she is responsible for all aspects of the organization, including designing applied research across five core issues and working on voting rights matters with the UCLA Voting Rights Project.

Sonni Waknin has the following relevant experience:

- Waknin has experience in drafting legal briefs, memoranda, and notice letters pursuant to the Federal Voting Rights Act, California Voting Rights Act, and the U.S. Constitution on various voting violations. Waknin has authored multiple notice letters to jurisdictions under Section 203 of the Federal Voting Rights Act to ensure language access for minority language groups. These notice letters have led to increased scrutiny on language access.
- Garcia v. Abbott
 - Waknin drafted briefs on the district and circuit court level submitted in Federal court in support of the plaintiffs, including Texas voters. Plaintiffs won a preliminary injunction in the federal district court, but the injunction was stayed by the Fifth Circuit. The case is currently pending before the U.S. Supreme Court.
- Higginson v. Becerra (Poway), 786 Fed. Appx. 705 (9th Cir. 2019)
 - Waknin co-authored an amicus brief to the Ninth Circuit representing the UCLA Voting Rights Project's stance defending the constitutionality of the California Voting Rights Act. This brief was relied upon by the court during oral arguments.
- Waknin co-authored legal scholarship on voting rights, including: Ensuring Equal Access to the Mail-In Ballot Box, UCLA L. REV. DISCOURSE, (August 31, 2020); Can President Trump Withhold Funds When States Expand Vote-by-Mail NW. UNIV. L. REV. OF NOTE, (Aug. 5, 2020); Legal Theories to Compel Vote-by-mail in Federal Court, CAL. L. REV. CIRCUIT, (May 13, 2020); and Vote-by-Mail Can Save Our Democracy, but Reforms are Needed, NW. UNIV. L. REV. OF NOTE, (March 23, 2020).
- Waknin is a graduate of the University of California, Los Angeles School of Law and assists Dr. Barreto and Mr. Dunn in teaching the Voting Rights Policy and Practice legal clinic. During law school, Waknin was an Associate Editor for the UCLA Law Review.

Alana Friedman's relevant experience:

- In her position with the UCLA Voting Rights Project, Friedman conducts legal research and writing on the Federal Voting Rights Act for target jurisdictions, tracks voting rights litigation, and writes policy papers on voting rights.
- Friedman has experience in civil rights litigation; she has drafted legal documents, including a motion to intervene in Klein dba Sweetcakes by Melissa v. Oregon Bureau of Labor and Industries.
- Friedman is licensed in California and is a graduate of the University of California, Los Angeles Law School.

Summary of Experience

As noted, the UCLA Voting Rights Project staff has a wealth of experience with the Federal and State voting laws, including significant experience in litigation and trial practice. Combined with their teaching and clinical education experience, as well their background of legal research and publishing history on voting rights, the UCLA VRP's expertise, education, and training is unmatched. Mr. Dunn's experience in voting rights, redistricting, and experience with Section 2 and Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act spans almost two decades. Dunn has been successful in representing parties in litigation on behalf of both voters and political subdivisions. He is also uniquely positioned to understand the constraints and considerations of those drawing lines and possibly defending themselves from suit as well as the considerations of voters who would be poised to challenge said maps.

Furthermore, expertise and experience with the Federal Voting Rights Act requires counsel to be able to understand the technical and statistical methodologies required of the law, which Dunn, Waknin and Diaz do. Both Waknin and Diaz's experience supporting voting rights litigation and Diaz's responsibility for briefing then-Attorney General Harris on the Federal Voting Rights Act enable the UCLA VRP to produce high-level briefings and writing for the Commission. The UCLA VRP team's experience with expert witnesses in over a dozen voting rights cases, coupled with its experience using and analyzing racially polarized voting data developed by consultants, allows the VRP to serve the Commission's needs.

4. Conflicts of Interest

Mr. Dunn, Ms. Waknin, Ms. Diaz, and Ms. Friedman have not undertaken lobbying work in California in the past 10 years, nor have they made political contributions to candidates as described in California Government Code Section 8252. Ms. Diaz has met with members of the Legislature and Executive branch officials with respect to funding issues related to the UCLA Latino Policy and Politics Initiative.

Compliance with Government Code Section 8252

As stated in the California Government Code Section 8252, the UCLA attorney's financial business, professional, lobbying or other relationships that present a potential conflict of interest are as follows:

- Chad W. Dunn currently represents the Texas Democratic Party as the party's attorney in several legal matters including cases to enforce the right to vote.

As to work relating to redistricting or other work during the past 10 years that could present the appearance of a conflict in connection with representation of the Commission:

- The UCLA Voting Rights Project attorneys have represented and continue to represent minority voters, African American, Latino and Asian-American citizens, in the past years in connection to redistricting.

Fee Arrangement

The UCLA Voting Rights Project understands the public service nature of the work the Commission is proposing and is open to working on a fixed fee rather than hourly basis. The way that the UCLA VRP would structure such a fixed fee would be dependent on how long the assignment will continue. If the scope of the assignment is larger than originally anticipated, the Project would expect adequate compensation, and if the scope is smaller, less compensation.

We anticipate that the work for the Commission would fall under two broad categories. First, the Commission will develop and implement a fair and legal redistricting process. Voting Rights Counsel should provide research and advice to assist the Commission in developing, from the first to the last step, a redistricting process that truly serves all California citizens and places the Commission in the best position to defend its work from potential legal challenges. As part of this work, Voting Rights Counsel shall carefully assist the commission retain and coordinate social science and historical research, develop a robust and comprehensive public input process, assist with responses to public inquiries and guide the entire process with a focus of ensuring compliance with all applicable laws, and engage with other qualified counsel with diverse but applicable legal expertise. For this work, the UCLA VRP would propose a flat fee of $175,000.00 to $225,000.00.

Second, the Commission will likely require written legal memoranda and opinions from qualified voting rights legal expert(s) regarding specific geographic regions of the State. These memoranda and opinions would require careful analysis of the local electoral and historical conditions that might implicate Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act. Therefore, the map adopted by the Commission should be drawn to address this critical federal law. This expert or counsel would give written opinions concerning these legal issues, provide public and private advice to the commission, and could potentially be called to testify in any filed court challenges. For this work, the UCLA VRP would propose a flat fee of $100,000.00 to $150,000.00.

Any litigation during or after the redistricting process are excluded. If the Commission would like the assistance of UCLA Voting Rights Project counsel in litigation matters, a separate fee arrangement would be established.

If the Commission envisions a different type of work or arrangement, the UCLA Voting Rights Project will work with the Commission to negotiate a fixed fee for the anticipated timeline that is acceptable to the Commission.

Please see the information requested attached to this proposal, including resumes.

Thank you for your consideration.

RECENT EXPERIENCE

Executive Director & Co-Founder

March 2017-Present

UCLA Latino Policy & Politics Initiative—LPPI is a comprehensive think tank that addresses the most critical domestic policy challenges facing communities of color in states and localities across the U.S. through research, advocacy, mobilization, and leadership development. Responsible for all aspects of the organization, including: recruiting and managing almost four-dozen UCLA faculty to serve as policy experts, initiating external cross-sector partnerships, designing applied research across five core issue areas, managing a robust legislative strategy, and directing fundraising/development activities.

Regional Director

August-November 2016

Democratic Party of Virginia—Directed robust voter protection program to support Democratic candidates in Virginia as part of the Clinton/Kaine presidential campaign's battleground state apparatus. Recruited, trained, and assigned over one-thousand attorneys to monitor the election and remedy election-related issues. Provided legal guidance and advice with respect to the First Amendment, Voting Rights Act of 1965, and state election law to campaign senior staff. Designed a language minority voter protection program for Asian Pacific Islander and Latino voters throughout the Commonwealth to ensure culturally and linguistically competent election monitoring.

Deputy Attorney General

August 2014-August 2016

Special Deputy Attorney General

May-August 2014

Executive Office of Attorney General Kamala D. Harris (Los Angeles, CA)—Served as a policy and legal advisor to the Attorney General on civil rights, consumer protection, criminal justice, immigration, and women's rights. Drafted and reviewed administrative guidance and information bulletins, conducted legal analysis and strategy for trial- and appellate-level matters, and served as counsel on legal matters. Managed the communications, legislative, and political strategy for external-facing partnerships and major affirmative agenda roll-outs. Responsible for the recruitment, hiring, and supervision of law clerks and member of the Executive Office's hiring committee.

- Civil Rights: Lead counsel on voting rights legal investigative package and responsible for VRA and CVRA-related briefings. Monitored and tracked discrimination and harassment on the basis of race, gender, and national origin in California's primary and secondary schools to inform Bureau of Children's Justice investigations.
- Women's Rights: Co-directed the Attorney General's Working Group on Cyber Exploitation, a private-public collaboration between technology companies, advocates, and law enforcement. Oversaw all aspects of roll-out, including legislative strategy, law enforcement bulletin, and the development of an online resource hub. Provided legal analysis, legislative strategy, and policy expertise in the crafting of a MOU between the University of California Office of the President and law enforcement to combat campus sexual assault and promote victim-centered policies.

- Consumer: Developed a repository of all California-based legal aid resources for students at for-profit colleges and co-developed an interactive triage tool to counsel students on debt relief. Co-counsel on an industry-wide investigation of for-profit online charter schools, resulting in a $168.5 million settlement with K12 Inc.
- Criminal Justice: Managed the 21st Century Policing portfolio, including the coordination of a formal Working Group composed of police chiefs and county sheriffs, principal researcher for the 90-Day Review of the Division of Law Enforcement, and co-designer of the nation's first state-certified Procedural Justice and Implicit Bias training for law enforcement, with Stanford University. Provided legal guidance, quantitative research, and legislative strategy for OpenJustice.
- Immigration: Managed portfolio, that included: coordinating a statewide response to the legal needs of unaccompanied minors fleeing Central America, the publication of legal guidance to law enforcement agencies regarding immigration enforcement, and educating immigrants about consumer fraud, public safety, and civil rights.

LEGAL & POLICY PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

Associate

October 2013-April 2014

California Voting Rights Act Roundtable—Performed complex legal research for voting rights docket. Supported senior partner in negotiations in Moreno v. Anaheim and provided research, writing, and strategy for the appeals team in Jaregui v. Palmdale, both involving the CVRA. Synthesized demographic and electoral data for over 1,000 at-large election districts in California to identify potential litigation targets and drafted two litigation memos.

Researcher

Winter 2011

National Employment Law Project (NELP)—Completed a review of relevant sociological, political science, and legal scholarship on the incidences of retaliation against low-wage immigrant workers to supplement the organization's Workers' Rights on ICE: How Immigration Can Stop Retaliation and Advance Labor Rights policy report.

Law Clerk

Fall 2012

U.S. Department of Justice, Civil Rights Division, Voting Section—Produced essential legal research memoranda and case briefs for robust Voting Rights Act docket, including pre-litigation Section 2 vote dilution claims, ongoing Section 5 pre-clearance issues, and trial preparation for the South Carolina v. U.S. voter identification trial.

Law Clerk

Summer 2012

Mexican American Legal Defense & Educational Fund—Collaborated with attorneys on impact litigation cases involving: the unlawfulness of Arizona Revised Statutes §§ 13-2928(A), (B) (SB 1070) under the First Amendment, the legality of immigration status inquiries under California employment discrimination law, and potential vote dilution claims under the CVRA.

Graduate Researcher

Fall 2011

Warren Institute on Law & Social Policy—Directed research on the constitutionality of direct democracy measures to support Richard Rothstein's book, The Color of Law, on housing discrimination and educational equity.

Law Intern

Summer 2011

The White House, Domestic Policy Council—Performed in-depth legal research and analysis, drafted confidential internal policy memoranda and reviewed proposed agency rule-making proposals under the supervision of Steven Croley, Special Assistant to the President. Participated in policy discussions with Executive Office staff and staffed inter-agency working groups on: regulatory affairs, government transparency, civil rights, criminal justice, housing, and LGBT affairs.

Counselor

August 2010-May 2011

East Bay Workers' Rights Clinic—Counseled low-income and unemployed workers on wage and hour disputes, unemployment benefits, and LGBT and race-based discrimination claims. Synthesized relevant labor and employment statutes to provide clients with culturally-competent advice.

Summer Associate

Summer 2009

The Greenlining Institute—Provided policy research and strategy on: green jobs, health care expansion, public education, and the state budget crisis. Co-authored and co-edited a UC Berkeley School of Public Health-funded policy brief on the potential impact of telemedicine on underserved communities lacking access to health care and technology.

Graduate Researcher

September 2008-August 2010

Center X at UCLA Graduate School of Education & Information Studies—Principal researcher for two longitudinal mixed-methods studies on school choice reforms within the Los Angeles Unified School District. Directed a quantitative inquiry documenting school choice pattern making in the Belmont Zone of Choice, a neighborhood school choice plan in Pico Union. Designed survey instruments, facilitated ethnographic interviews and site visits, and presented research at community meetings. Integrated qualitative data with a large-scale statistical dataset of unique student information. Advised LAUSD leadership on research findings and policy reforms for two years.

About us

The UCLA VRP was founded in August 2018 by Dr. Matt Barreto, Ph.D. And Chad Dunn, J.D., both experts in their fields. Mr. Dunn is a civil rights attorney, with a particular voting rights focus, who, for the last 15 years, has handled critically important voting and civil rights cases around the country. Dr. Barreto is a respected voting rights expert witness, best known for his work on researching voter behavior and other redistricting related issues.

After years of acting as voting rights litigators and expert witnesses, Chad Dunn and Dr. Matt Barreto realized that there was a gaping hole in voting rights advocacy; a lack of training of young lawyers and social scientists to take up the mantle and advance voting rights. After this realization, Barreto and Dunn founded the UCLA Voting Rights Project with a threefold mission: train a new generation of lawyers, expert witnesses, and voting behavior researchers; advance voting rights public policy through innovating social science and data science used in voting rights cases; and actively participate in voting rights litigation and appeals on the local and state level.

The UCLA VRP also operates a high-level voting rights academic research center housed at the number one public university in the United States. The social science behind voting rights litigation has remained, in many ways, relatively constant for decades. The VRP strives to create a new model reflective of the current age and technology. Social scientists and students at the Project work to create innovative data-driven methods to show voting rights violations. One of our methods, termed Bayesian Improve Surname Geocoding (BISG), utilizes a new technique to more accurately observe the voting behavior of citizens in order to measure racial polarization in voting. This new method was recently accepted by a New York federal court in an important voting rights victory.

The VRP actively publishes in-depth policy papers, State-specific white papers, and legal scholarship. In just the first few years of our existence, our work has been published in the California Law Journal, Northwestern Law Journal Online, and the UCLA Law Journal Discourse. The central focus of the UCLA VRP is to ensure that there is a new generation of well-trained leaders who can protect the right to vote for all Americans.

Recent Highlights

The UCLA VRP has success during 2020 in litigation matters, providing expert witness testimony in state and federal court cases, and publishing social science, policy papers, and legal scholarship.

Research Reports:

- In partnership with the California Secretary of State Office, the UCLA VRP is publishing a report on language access in the Voter's Choice Act. This report designated counties during both the 2020 primary election and 2020 general election.
- The UCLA VRP received a grant from the Russell Sage Foundation to conduct survey research on the rapid transition to vote-by-mail during the Covid-19 pandemic, as well as on the effect the transition had on minority and immigrant populations in the United States.

Litigation Matters:

- The UCLA VRP represented voters in Texas League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) v. Abbott to fight against Governor Abbott's executive order limiting mail ballot drop boxes to one-ballot dropbox per county, regardless of population. The project also represented voters in Garcia v. Abbott to strike down Texas' discriminatory no-excuse vote-by-mail requirements.
- The Project intervened on behalf of Latino voters as defendants in California in RNC v. Newsom, to defend Governor Newsom's executive order to mail ballots to all voters in California during the Covid-19 crisis. The VRP, along with Columbia Legal Services and the ACLU of Washington, won a case against the Yakima City Council in Yakima, Washington. The Council had attempted to dilute Latino voting power and circumvent the spirit of a Voting Rights Act Section 2 court order.

More Litigation...

- Defended California's Motor Voter law and protected automatic voter registration in California on behalf of Intervenor-Defendants in Hoge v. Padilla.
- Dr. Matt Barreto, the Project's Faculty Director, served as an expert witness on behalf of California in California v. Ross, challenging the Commerce Departments' decision to add a citizenship question to the 2020 census. Barreto was also an expert witness in voting rights cases in Georgia, Pennsylvania, Texas, and Missouri challenging voting restrictions due to COVID-19.

The Social Science and Policy

Publications:

- The VRP was the first organization to write about the need to implement safe elections through vote-by-mail in March, publishing Protecting Democracy: Implementing Equal and Safe Access to the Ballot Box During a Global Pandemic. This report was widely circulated in Congress.

- The Project is the only voting rights organization that has published policy reports in partnership with medical experts from the David Geffen School of Medicine at UCLA on the topic of voting during a global pandemic: Protecting Public Health In the 2020 Elections and Voting and Infection Prevention of Covid-19.
- The VRP published Debunking the Myth of Voter Fraud in Mail Ballots, which demonstrated the safety and security of mail ballots at a time in which mail voting was in question during the 2020 election.

Legal Scholarship

- Ensuring Equal Access to the Mail-in Ballot Box, UCLA L. Rev. Discourse (Aug. 31, 2020)
- Legal Theories to Compel Vote-by-Mail in Federal Court, 202 Cal. L. Rev. Cir. 166 (May 13, 2020)
- Vote-By-Mail Can Save Our Democracy, But Reforms are Needed, Nw. Univ. L. Rev. Of Note, (Apr. 30, 2020).

Email: Chad@uclavrp.org

Chad Dunn, a nationally known civil and voting rights attorney is the co-founder and co-director of the UCLA Voting Rights Project. He has received national attention for his trial and appellate work on voting rights, redistricting, sex discrimination under Title IX, prison conditions, police conduct, and government ethics. Dunn has an extensive history representing government entities and jurisdictions in redistricting and voting rights matters. Mr. Dunn was one of the trial attorneys in the three-judge federal court cases in Washington D.C. and San Antonio concerning Texas' 2011 state house, senate, and congressional redistricting plans. He was a lead trial lawyer in the three-judge federal case in Washington D.C. concerning Texas' voter photo identification law, in which the court enjoined Texas from implementing the law under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act. After the Supreme Court effectively eliminated Section 5 with its opinion in Shelby County v. Holder, Mr. Dunn was a lead counsel in the second federal court challenge to Texas's ID law, which ultimately resulted in the law being struck down again. In 2019, he successfully challenged Texas's effort to purge naturalized citizens from its voting rolls. Most recently, Mr. Dunn has challenged Texas's denial of vote-by-mail to citizens under age 65 as being violative of the 26th Amendment, and Florida's efforts to charge fees and fines to former felons in order to register to vote in violation of the 14th Amendment. Chad publishes on Voting Rights and Constitutional Law. Recently his writing and research have focused on voting during the pandemic. See Chad W. Dunn et al., Legal Theories to Compel Vote-by-Mail in Federal Court, 11 Calif. L. Rev. Online 166 (May 2020) and UCLA Voting Rights Project, Vote-By-Mail Can Save Our Democracy, But Reforms are Needed, Nw. Univ. L. Rev. Of Note, (April 30, 2020). Mr. Dunn is licensed in several states to practice law.

Sonja Diaz is a practicing civil rights attorney and policy advisor. As Founding Director of UCLA Latino Policy & Politics Initiative (LPPI), Diaz co-founded the first multi-issue think tank focused on Latinos in the University of California. Prior to LPPI, Diaz served as policy counsel to U.S. Sen. Kamala D. Harris during her first and second terms as California’s attorney general, managing legal and policy issues of statewide and national importance, including civil rights, consumer protection, criminal justice, immigration, and privacy and technology policy. Diaz has also managed domestic policy portfolios at three California nonprofits, clerked in the White House’s Domestic Policy Council under President Barack Obama, and supported litigation efforts at MALDEF, the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Department of Justice, and California’s Bureau of Children’s Justice. Diaz routinely briefs state legislators and local elected officials from across the U.S. on evidence-based governance and emerging trends in domestic policy. Her research and commentary have been mentioned in major news outlets, including The New York Times, The Washington Post, The Los Angeles Times, NBC, NPR, Politico, and Univision. She is a contributing political analyst to KTLA 5, a benchmark of Los Angeles news television. Diaz received her J.D. from UC Berkeley’s School of Law, holds an M.P.P. from UCLA’s Luskin School of Public Affairs, and a B.A. in politics from UC Santa Cruz. She is a University of Michigan Public Policy & International Affairs fellow, valedictorian of People for the American Way’s Frontline Leaders Academy, and LatCrit’s unanimous student scholar awardee for her paper on Latino voting rights. Ms. Diaz is licensed in California.

Email: swaknin@luskin.ucla.edu

Sonni Waknin is the Managing Attorney and Voting Rights Counsel at the UCLA Voting Rights Project. Sonni believes that to ensure an equitable democracy, elections must be free, fair, and devoid of systemic racism. Voting is the right that preserves all other rights and must be defended. Waknin is responsible for managing all aspects of the Voting Rights Project, including the Project's litigation docket and legal scholarship. She recently worked on the Project's litigation in Texas and Washington and co-published the UCLA Voting Rights Project's: Vote-By-Mail: Debunking the Myth of Voter Fraud in Mail Ballots, a report aimed at addressing the concerns associated with vote-by-mail programs. Waknin has wanted to be a voting rights litigator since she was in high school.

Previously, Waknin interned with the ACLU Voting Rights Project and for Common Cause's National Redistricting Project. She holds her J.D. from UCLA School of Law, is an alumna of the David J. Epstein Program in Public Interest Law and Policy, and holds a B.A. from Rutgers University.

Alana Friedman is a Legal Fellow at the UCLA Voting Rights Project. She is currently working on forthcoming publications for the Voting Rights Project, as well as assisting in litigation. Recently, she assisted in organizing the 21st Century Voting Rights Conference, a two-day virtual conference to discuss needed voting rights policy on the federal level.

As a law student, she focused on LGBT Rights and was part of the Critical Race Studies Program. She believes that all people deserve equal rights and representation and works to further this goal. Ensuring equal access to the ballot box is crucial to this pursuit. Alana previously interned at Lambda Legal, the Williams Institute, and the UCLA Title IX Office. She was also a Senior Editor for the Dukeminier Awards Journal.

Alana received her J.D. from the UCLA School of Law and B.A. from Pomona College. She is licensed to practice in the State of California.
